

Michael Slaby

Passionate and committed to helping humanity save the world, Michael Slaby is a world leader in media, strategy, and technology, and how together they drive politics and business. He is currently Chief Strategist at Harmony Labs working on accelerating media reform and transformation. Previously, he founded and was Head of Mission of Timshel -- a social-impact technology company. He was a Fellow at Shorenstein Center at the Harvard Kennedy School of Government. Michael helped lead Obama for America as Chief Integration and Innovation Officer in 2012 where he oversaw all of technology and analytics, and as Deputy Digital Director and Chief Technology Officer in 2008.

Author of For ALL the People from Disruption Books.

In addition, Michael has served as an advisor and board member to initiatives including the United Nations, the U.S. State Department, Rhize, Bright Pink, I Am That Girl, and LiveStrong and was named to Crain's Chicago 40 Under 40 and their Tech 50. He is a graduate of Brown University and currently lives in Rhinebeck, NY with his much more awesome wife, Lydia, where he tries to take advantage of finally living close to the mountains.